

CG Docket No. 02-278.

I do not wish to have the State of Wisconsin No Call List Law lessened in any way. This law was devised as a consumer protection program to eliminate calls by telemarketers (unsolicited calls). After this law went into effect, it has been a blessing not to have to constantly answer calls that in the end are harrasing and can totaling upset a person. Most will not take no for an answer.

If a consumer decides to cancel a service of a business, why would they want to be continually contacted by that business for future service?

Also, do not believe telemarketers should be able to make contact through cell phones as that would become a cost to the consumer by incoming phone charges. When something costs the consumer not requested by the consumer, something must be done to preserve our rights.

Thank you.
